Full insurance

Full insurance offers a full interest and capital guarantee at all times. Shortfalls and restructuring contributions are ruled out; no obligation to make payments in arrears can arise. The guarantee is provided by the insurer or the lender.

Gross profit

Gross profit is calculated as the difference between gross premiums and allocated direct benefits, broken down by savings process, risk process and cost process.

Minimum distribution ratio

The regulations concerning the minimum distribution ratio determine the formula by which the profit is divided between the insured persons and the life insurer. Under the applicable regulations, at least 90% of the gross income (minimum distribution ratio) must be used for the benefit of the insured persons. In addition to allocated benefits, changes in provisions as well as transfers to the profit fund are taken into account.

Operating profit

At least 90% of gross income is used for the benefit of the insured persons. The remainder is the operating profit (before taxes) available to the insurer.

Operating expenses

Operating expenses include acquisition costs, the cost of processing benefits, advertising costs and general administration expenses.
